ABRAS

The ancient Incas used the "Abrás" to navigate the Andes mountains in Salta, Argentina. "Abrás" were natural trails created by earthquakes or rivers, which allowed the Incas to connect their vast empire. For them, Abras were a blessing from the "Pacha Mama" to which they would leave offerings.

In the same way that the Incas used to thank the "Mother Earth" before starting a new adventure through these paths, we want to honor our friends with this Abras Torrontés from the unique and singular terroir of Cafayate, Salta.
