Our story

QARAMY means “poetry” in the ancient Quechua language, a native South American language spoken primarily in the Andes. The name symbolizes the winery’s expression of loyalty, tradition and commitment to its terroirs and wines.

From the beginning, winemaker Karim Mussi wished to transcend by basing his winemaking on three fundamental pillars; innovation, terroir and an awareness and vineyard sustainability. His obsession to find the most pure fruit, seeking for a unique identity through original old vine rootstocks, has led him to achieve a terroir driven concept, blooming in each wine. This results in wines, notable for their balance, elegance and aging capacity as his signature style.

Our Vineyards

Our high altitude vineyards (1150 m.a.s.l) grow at the footfills of the majestic Andes in Tunuyan, in the Uco Valley region, in Mendoza province.

It is here, where the dry, stony soils, the wide temperature range, and the high sun exposure offer our grapes a unique strength and personality. Our vineyards are subject to obsessive maintenance and supervision so that we can get the most out of each varietal.
